The purpose of this society is to offer a feminist perspective to the business forces of the fashion industry. We aim to offer guidance to students that would like to embark their own journey in the business side of the fashion world. Our intentions are to foster a strong relationship with fashion companies and improve UCL's fashion network. This will allow students for generations to have better access to the necessary resources to become part of the dynamic fashion world. We will bring like-minded individuals together to participate in events where professionals from the industry discuss their experience and share tips. We aim to offer informal monthly socials for members to get to know each other and explore new ideas. We are hoping to form a community where students like ourselves can connect and form new friendships, whilst learning valuable lessons from both professionals and each other.

Through industry presentations, networking events and discussions with a plethora of professionals from different sectors, we want students to engage with them on crucial topics related to their respective fields. Various themes will be explored, such as the quest for sustainability, social media, and women in the luxury supply chain. Students will be engaged in these themes, with the four sectors of our planned activities. We want to meet up with entrepreneurs, fashion designers and artists related to the fashion field. But also have industrial tours to see the work in industries. Finally, it is of major significance to us to display the work we will do as a team over the years and help our members start their own fashion adventures.
